John,

We in southern MS are so eaten up with Brelands that not a month goes by that we do not have a Breland obit in our paper.

The Walls have lived in the central part of MS for many years. We have a few DeLoaches down here.

I would send you a listing, as is my usual, but I do not want to wear my printer out.

Have you a specific??

Regards,

Jim

JESSE BRELAND

One Jesse Breland married Mary Bostick in South Carolina, and when their first child was born, about 1820, they emigrated to South Mississippi and settled on Black Creek in south-east Perry County. The name of Jesse Breland appears on the census rolls of Jackson County in 1825 and 1830, but this was probably due to the uncertainty of county lines and they were probably living at the same place.

An outline of the descendants of this couple was first published in the 1890's by a grandson, Bostick "Crab" Breland and in recent years has been brought down to date by Mrs. Inez Breland Hooper, of Moss Point.

-Explanation of the system used in the attached list-
(THE HENRY SYSTEM)

This descendancy list is based on the Henry system of geneology. The Henry System is a complete departure from traditional systems for a descendancy. In this method, the first person is number 1, and his or her children are 11, 12, 13, 14, and so on. The number of digits indicates the number of generations and the order of birth. The Henry system number 14235 is read from right to left as the fifth child of the third child of the second child of the fourth child of number 1 and indicates that the person so numbered is in the fifth generation from number 1. in order to make the system work in families with more than 9 children, the tenth one is numbered 1A, the eleventh one 1B, the twelfth one 1C, the 13th one 1D and so on. 1A is always read as the tenth child of #1, 1B as the eleventh child of #1 and 1C is the twelfth child of #1. Otherwise the system uses all numbers. There are only two columns, Adults and Children. Under the adult section the children of the listed person are listed with their birthdate (if known) and the ones who are continued as adults are marked with a + sign.

To look up an individual, first look in the index for their name. Their listing as children will show who their parents are. Their listing as adults will give the names of their spouse(s), the names and birthdates of their children (if known), and the date of their dates. In some cases there will be further biographical information given.

N O T I C E

This information was gathered over a period of some forty years. It is, for the most part, correct. However, I am sure that there are errors and omissions on which I stand to be corrected or given additional information. My name and address is listed at the end of each page and I would greatly appreciate hearing from anyone who has further information on the persons listed or any other descendant of Hillery Breland of whom they have information. In fact, I will count it an honor to hear from anyone interested in the Breland-Breeland and collateral lines family history. My own personal collateral lines include Dunaway, Beard, Blackstock and Hall.

A. OLIVER FRANKLIN BRELAND

A. Oliver Franklin Breland, born January 30, 1825, in Copiah County, Mississippi, died November 25, 1881, in Neshoba County, Mississippi, married Sunday, May 5, 1847, Manerva Odom, born September 18, 1826, in Hinds County, Mississippi, died December 19, 1913. Oliver Franklin Breland was baptized at Pinckney Baptist Church in 1850 or thereabouts. He was an ordained minister of the Missionary Baptist faith, having been ordained by old Redland Baptist Church about 1866. The presbytery perhaps included Elders D. D. Booth and N. L. Clarke. He was a useful and successful preacher and pastor for about fifteen years the latter part of his life. He was also a volunteer in the Confederate Army during the Civil War, was a member of Company E, 5th Mississippi State Troops, called Minute Men. He enlisted at Union in the early part of 1862 and joined the above company September 5 of the same year. He was First Lieutenant of his company. He did guard duty at Meridian and then at Columbus until April 7, 1863, when his company was ordered to Vicksburg and took part in the siege of that city, May 18-July 4, 1863. He was captured at the fall of Vicksburg and paroled. Afterwards he joined another company and became a part of the 6th Mississippi Cavalry. He died at his home near Dixon, in the western part of Neshoba County and was buried in the cemetery of Mt. Sinai Baptist Church near the Neshoba County Fairgrounds. He was also a Mason. His wife also was buried in the same cemetery many years later. Four of his sons became Baptist preachers, and one daughter married a Baptist preacher. Children: a-1. George Washington, a-2. Edward William, a-3. Nathan Obediah, a-4. Alice Jane, a-5. Nancy Elizabeth, a-6. Huldah Eveline, a-7. Andrew Jackson, a-8. James Franklin, a-9. Francis Marion, a-10. Mary Ann Martha (Mattie, a-11. arrived in America the spelling was done by court clerks and census-takers who probably spelled the name as it sounded to them. It would appear that William Breland may not have learned how to read and write English by 1820; his signature on his will appears to be typed and witnessed rather than actually signed by him. The English spelling of the name Breland is correct.

Records are found in Abraham's name in 1755 in North Carolina:

Abraham purchased and sold land in North Carolina in 1762 and 1768 and received Land Grants from King George III in 1769 and 1775 in Beaufort District, South Carolina. Jacob Breland petitioned land on the "Peedee or the waters thereof" in South Carolina in 1755, and he served in the 2nd S.C. Regiment in the Revolutionary War.

In the census of 1790 which was the first census taken in the Nation, we find in Beaufort County, South Carolina these records:

Breelo, Abram	2		4		5
Breelo, Absolum	1	2	4		1
Breelo, Abram	1	1	5		1
Breelo, Amos	1	3	2
Breelo, William	1				1
Breelo, Samuel	1		1

Key: a = free white males 16+
b = free white males 16-c = free white females
d = all other free
e = slaves

Field Notes

M. G. Breland

Graves site of three:

Elizabeth Black Breland

Absalom (Ab) Breland

An unknown baby

Buried in the late 1800's

About 1 1/2 miles north of Hwy. 26 at Whites Crossing on rural road. This Absalom could be son of Elisha Breland. II? Anyway folk knowledge says this Absalom Breland was hunted down and killed by his son because Absalom was a wife beater. This was in Harrison county at that time later in Stone County.

Absalom Breland II moved from Leaf River area to the site of new home on Brushy Creek on Neely-Leakesville Road (old Hwy 24) about 2 1/2 miles east of Neely. This home site is now known as Teed McInnis old place. Teed's Grandson, Owen McInnis (Tommy) now lives there. The old cemetery in the old field back of the house has been destroyed by bulldozer. There was about 25 graves (unmarked). Two graves had been headstones. I assume the marked graves were Absalom II and his wife Elizabeth. Absalom II died at the age of 60 years in 1849. Wife Elizabeth lived to be over 100 years of age. This information was given to me by Mrs. Abbie Breland Jenkins of Rt. 1 Box 107, Leakesville, Ms., 39451. Miss Abbie is in good health and sharp mind is 37 years of age, born September 11, 1900. Abbie is Great- Granddaughter of Absalom Breland II.

HIRAM BRELAND

notes, misc.

"Trip Through the Piney Woods"

By United States General J. F. H. Clairborne

Published in Natchez Free Trader and Gazette dated July 16, 1840

"Left Old Augusta for Mr. Breland's (Hiram) , a very comfortable house of entertainment some sixteen miles distant."

Hiram Breland had first school in Greene County, First inside his home, then in a one room log house outside for students. Hiram was the head schoolmaster.

Hiram was the Post Master at a nearby Post Office.

From the Book: "Rivers of Water", Volumn 2. by the author W. Harvell Jackson, on page 276 ;

The Dantzlars, Dennys, Griffins, and other brought capital which was used later in developing the greatest sawmill complex in the state. Capitalists like Hiram Breland of Greene County had a big stock in the Dantzler enterprises, according to Holt Myers of New Augusta, a descendant of Breland.

Abraham Breland/ (Born 1725 in North Carolina) died 1805 in South Carolina.

This is a personal research effort to locate the graves of my great-grandfather Hiram Breland and his brothers, sister Mary and Uncle Samuel and their wives also the children of Hiram Breland and their spouses. Thanks to Charles G. Breland and his fine booklet of January 16, 1987 titled The Breland Families of the Southern States 1755-1850 and other books and field research I have quite a bit of information for our family files and to pass this information on to Charles G. Breland and to other writers and researchers to get additional data on these Breland Families and their descendants. Note some of this data may be in error. One could not prove that the body under a headstone was the person names on the headstone. Foul play could be involved. Just an example, one can not be sure on all dates, times and places, also given names.

ELECTIONEERING IN MISSISSIPPI.

ROUGH RIDING DOWN SOUTH.

A LONG the Gulf of Mexico, or what the United States Coast Survey styles the Mississippi Sound, extending across the State of Mississippi, with a depth in the interior of about one hundred miles, there lies a region of country usually denominated the Pine Woods. The soil is sandy and thin, producing small crops of rice, potatoes, and corn, a little cotton, indigo, and sugar-cane, for home consumption. But it sustains a magnificent pine forest, capable of supplying for centuries to come the navies of the world. The people are of primitive habits, and are chiefly lumbermen or herdsmen. Exempt from swamps and inundation, from the vegetable decomposition incidental to large agricultural districts, fanned by the sea-breeze and perfumed by the balsamic exhalations of the pine, it is one of the healthiest regions in the world. If the miraculous fountain, in search of which the brave old Ponce de Leon met his death in the lagoons of Florida in 1512, may be found any where, it will be in the district I am now wandering over. I have never seen so happy a people. Not afflicted with sickness or harassed by litigation; not demoralized by vice or tormented with the California fever; living in a state of equality, where none are rich and none in want; where the soil is too thin to accumulate wealth, and yet sufficiently productive to reward industry; manufacturing all that they wear; producing all they consume; and preserving, with primitive simplicity of manners, the domestic virtues of their sires. Early marriages are universal. Fathers yet infants in law, and happy grandams yet in the vigor of womanhood, may be found in every settlement; and numerous are the firesides around which cluster ten or a dozen children, with mothers still lovely and buoyant as in the days of their maiden bloom.

Leaving the Gulf shore at Pascagoula for the interior, in a couple of hours the traveler finds himself on the banks of a broad, deep, beautiful river, the Escatawba, curving gently down to mingle with the ocean. It flows through a forest of colossal growth. Many of these heavy Titans were overthrown by the great hurricane of '52, which began at 10 A.M., August 24, and blew with increasing fury until 12 M. next day, raging with undiminished violence until 12 at night, when it began to abate. It tore away whole masses of bluff on the sea-shore, dug up the earth from the roots of trees, blew down the potato hills as it swooped along the surface, and prostrated forests in its mad career.

Here, at what is now called Elder's Ferry, once stood the lodge of the last chieftain of the Pascagoulas. His warriors had all perished in the fatal wars with the Muscogees of Alabama. Sole survivor of the last conflict, the enemy still upon his trail, he led the women and children from the Escatawba to the sea, preferring death in his much loved waters to captivity and slavery. You have heard of the mysterious music which at midnight chimes along these shores; a low, late-like strain, sometimes a vesper hymn, sometimes like a harp-string breaking. When the winds and surges sleep, in the still hours of night, I have often heard this plaintive anthem; and tradition says it is the death-chant of the Pascagoulas that wails along the sea.

The Indian village stood on a picturesque bluff, the gentle river, flowing through prairies of verdure, margined by aged oaks that lift their heads among the clouds and bathe their mossy beards in the silver spray beneath. The country spreads out into a continuous meadow of boundless extent, on every side dotted with little islets of palm-like trees. At intervals a serpentine line of ravine comes sweeping along, fringed with dwarf laurel, myrtle, jasmine, and other parasites, and the whole plain around is embroidered with flowers of every hue. Ah! it is pleasant to bivouac in these solitary plains, the quiet stars smiling upon you, and the fragrant winds singing in the trees around. There is a charm in these grand old woods—in these laughing waters—in these remote retreats, where only an echo of the storms of life is heard. No wonder the imaginative ancients peopled them with divinities: for here, at every step, one can but feel the presence of a God; and the feeling chastens and refines the heart. It is not in your gorgeous temples, with coquettish eyes and Shylock countenances around, and vanity peeping out even from the pulpit, that one truly feels the sentiment of religion in its humanizing and exalting influences.

By the road-side, near the ruins of a rude country meeting-house, long since deserted, may be seen a solitary grave. Years ago a wanderer, once favored by fortune, high in the profession of the law, died near this spot, the wretched victim of a debasing vice. His body, his bottle, and the last lines he ever penned were found near where he now sleeps:

Pilgrim, whosoever thou stray,
Pause here upon thy weary way.
Take this relic if thou may,
And for its thirsty owner pray.
Fatal gift, when overflowing!
Oh, that men should ever know ing,
Servant be to liquor's spell,
Sorrow from the caves of hell!

Touch not—'tis poisonous to thee;
Taste not—alas, it ruined me!
The unclean thing forever thine,
Or thou, O pilgrim, art undone!

In this silent house of grace
Seek thy Maker, face to face:
Ask thy conscience, if thou wilt,
Dost thou good, or dost thou ill?

Lonely now my way I go,
Lingering through my life of woe;
Stranger, for the lost one pray,
And God will bless thee every day.
On thy hearth-stone he will fling
Countless blessings following,
In thy spring time, in thy age,
Every day of life's brief page;
In thy health, and in thy store,
Grace and goodness evermore!

Crossing the Chickasawha River I took refuge from the noonday sun in the hospitable dwelling of Mr. R—. It is perched on an elevated bluff. Far down in a field below, on the river-side, his servants had been at work, and might now be seen winding up a zigzag path toward the house, to get the mid-day meal. A group of tiny darkeys were sitting under the trees in the yard awaiting their mothers. Suddenly a little cloud gathered on the horizon—there was a single burst of thunder—a single flash that blinded me for a moment—and then, oh what a shriek of agony from the wretched mothers! Three of the children had been killed by the fatal bolt. Never, ah never shall I forget that sight of sorrow, and the wailings of those broken hearts! I have seen the strong man crushed; the fond mother swooning over the loss of her first-born; the young and beautiful, just stepping into life on a pathway of flowers, stung by the serpent, and snatched away, leaving for the survivors, in the dim future, only a long despair; but never had I witnessed the intense grief of these simple slaves. All that they had to live for was wrapped up in the stricken infants that now, all lifeless, they pressed to their distracted bosoms.

Leaving the scene of sorrow, I entered the great pine forest that leads to the town of Augusta. The woods were on fire. The road lies on a high ridge or backbone, and at short intervals on each side there are lateral ridges running down into deep reed-benches below. Along one of these vertebrae, on my left, a mighty volume of smoke and flame and eddying leaves came rolling rapidly toward me. The road itself, but rarely traveled at this season of the year, was covered several inches deep with pine straw, which was soon in a blaze. There was literally "a fire in my rear." Dashing forward, I meant to drive down a ridge on my right until the road should be cleared, but the flames, swept by the whirling winds, had by this time burst out there, and came surging into the sea of fire just behind me. I had no choice but to run for it. Though noonday, it was as black as midnight. The smoke of one hundred thousand acres of combustibles was around me. The roar of the devouring element, like the boom of a tremendous surf, was above me. The flames were protruding, like the tongues of hell constrictors, on each side of me, melting the varnish of my buggy and crisping my whiskers; and, ever and anon, the crash of a falling pine, uprooted by the fire, seemed to be discharged in minute-guns in token of my distress. On rushed the fiery torrent—dank and rear—up hill and down—and on I drove, at a killing gait, only ten paces in advance; my carpet-bag smoking, my hat and coat singed, my face and hands charred, when suddenly the wind shifted, and the flaming dragon plunged away to the left, hissing through the crackling reed-brakes, and shaking his terrible crest among the lofty trees.

Exhausted by this frightful contention, I was glad to find shelter at the wayside inn of my worthy friend, Mr. Hiram Breeland, of Greene County. He is famous for peach and honey; for river trout, venison steaks, and fried chicken, and indeed for every thing that a weary traveler covets. His wife is a model in her way. They have had eighteen children, and are yet a young and handsome couple. Far and near this is known as "the musical family." Six daughters in the bloom of life, richly dowered with those perfections that men sigh for and never forget, possess rare musical gifts; and their concerts with voice and violins are really enchanting. Excited and nervous after the fiery ordeal I had passed, they soothed my soul with melody, and my slumbers with charming dreams. Long after the witching hour of night, in the delicious delirium between sleeping and waking, the tinkle of the guitar and a sweet voice, softer than a sigh, mingled with the lullaby of the winds in the tops of the aged pines.

Their names are in harmony with their music. What can be more melodious than Elizabeth Amanda, Priscilla Brunetta, Louvena Annetta, Martha Miranda, Zelphi Emmeline, and Sophronie Angelina?

This house has been a favorite stopping-place for candidates for many years, and Breland is pretty well posted up with anecdotes.

When Harry Cage and Franklin E. Plummer were canvassing for Congress they came here together, and Cage began to joke and sport with the children, much to the mother's delight. But Plummer soon won her heart. He picked up the little wee one, just then toddling about, placed it across his lap, turned up its little petticoats, and began to search for red bugs!

Next morning Cage stole out before day, went to the wood-pile, cut a turn of wood, determined to win the "old lady's" favor by making her fire, while Plummer, as he fancied, lay snoring in bed. While toiling up the hill with his load, what was his astonishment to see the old 'un milking her cow, and Plummer holding off the calf by the tail!

A day or two after this, said Squire B., Cage made a tip-top speech at Greene Court House. It was hard to beat, and Plummer knew it. So when he got up he said: "Fellow-citizens, I would answer the gentleman's argument if there was any argument to answer. It reminds me of an honest couple down in my county who are troubled with a very small specimen of a child that cries all night. The husband, much tormented, complained that he could not get a moment's sleep. 'Spank it, then,' says the wife. He fumbled about, but the child continued to cry. 'Well, why don't you spank it?' says she. 'Because,' said he, 'I can't find any thing to spank!'"

It is hardly necessary to say that Cage "incontinently caved in," and refused to travel any farther with the Yankee wagon-boy.

"Plummer was hard pressed sometime after this, being charged with sundry matters affecting his integrity. He deliberately sat down and wrote an account of his visit to my house, charging that he had attempted to swindle me, had behaved with gross indecorum to my family, and had been kicked out of doors. This he contrived to have published, and it went the round of the papers, creating great excitement. He called on me for my certificate, which, of course, was promptly given, for I was surprised and indignant at such a slander. The reaction was tremendous; and after this nobody in this section would believe any thing against Plummer."

When the Hon. Powhatan Ellis, a very finished gentleman, was traveling through this district electioneering for some office, he lost his portmanteau in attempting to ford a creek. Plummer immediately advertised its contents: "6 ruffled shirts, 6 cambric handkerchiefs, 1 hair-brush, 1 tooth-brush, 1 nail-brush, 1 pair curling tongs, 2 sticks pomatum, 1 box pearl-powder, 1 bottle Cologne, 1 do. rose-water, 4 pairs silk stockings, and 2 pairs kid gloves." This defeated the Judge. He was set down as a born aristocrat and "swelled head."

Plummer was a poor young lawyer, boarding, or loafing, at a tavern in Westville, when he announced himself for Congress. He hadn't a single "red" in his pocket. He opened the canvass in Benton, put up at the best hotel, dined a dozen friends every day, and opened a very liberal account at the bar. On the third day, when about to depart, he cried out to the crowd, "Gentlemen, I wish to make my public acknowledgments to our generous landlord. He has treated me like a prince; he has feasted my friends; his tipple has run freely. Sir," said he, turning to the landlord, "if you ever come to my town don't go to a hotel: put up with me; I shall be proud to reciprocate your hospitality!" With these words he vaulted on his horse, and was out of sight before the astonished Boniface could "say turkey" about his bill.

While sojourning at this pleasant retreat it was agreed, one day, that we should go out on a deer-drive. I was wrapping up a lunch to put in my pocket, and said to my boy Tom, "Well, Tom, how about this butter? I can't put it in my pocket." "No, massa," said Tom, "him run away. But you kin eat him 'fore you go!"

On a deer-drive in the South one man follows the hounds in the thickets or reed brakes where the herds usually feed, while three or four others take their stands at various points which they are expected to cross in their flight. The dogs soon broke cover; a noble doe came bounding by me. I fired and missed; but passing on, the Squire, who is a noted shot, brought her down. The outcries of the huntsman soon called us down to the brake, and there we saw a most extraordinary spectacle. Two bucks of the largest size in deadly combat, their branching antlers so interlocked that neither could use them against the other. The ground was torn up all around; their sides were dripping blood; and they had evidently fought long before this singular union of their weapons terminated the combat. Their furious struggles at our approach only united them more closely; and thus they would have perished. The hunters shot them, and informed me that they had often found the skeletons of bucks that had thus died, their horns so locked that no ingenuity could undo them.

The buck is a timid animal until wounded. He then stands at bay, and is dangerous to approach. He is the sworn enemy of the rattlesnake. When he perceives one, he walks around it until it throws itself into a coil, and then the buck vaults into the air and comes down upon it with his pointed hoofs. Not content with killing it, he stamps it into shreds. Those noxious reptiles always multiply as the deer diminish.

VOL. XXV.—No. 143.—C

Speaking of rattlesnakes, my friend Colonel Wilkins, of Green Court House, tells me that he was once rolling logs in a piece of new ground on the Bigbee River, near Bladen Springs, when one of his men cried out, "Here's a rattlesnake!" Presently another sung out; and all round the "clearing" they kept up the cry, until the Colonel, quite angry, cried out, "Let the logs alone, and all of you go to snaking!" They piled up fifty-three in the course of the evening.

I once went to purchase a country seat on the bayou of St. John, in the vicinity of New Orleans, belonging to Mr. Michel, who had gone to France. It was occupied by Mr. Creecy, an old Vicksburg editor. Strolling into the garden, I was about to step toward an orange hedge to gather a few leaves, when he said "Look out for snakes!" "What," said I, "have you snakes here?"

"Walk this way," said Creecy. He led me to a point where three or four ditches, communicating with the bayou and with the swamp, intersected, and I counted a dozen dead moccasins lying about, and some twenty navigating the different ditches. "This is our only game," said he. "I shoot moccasins every afternoon!"

Mr. Michel lost an excellent purchaser for his place, and my brother editor held on until the snakes fairly run him out of the house.

There was once a man by the name of Galendee living in Hancock county, who was, perhaps, rather unjustly suspected of hog stealing. He came running in from the woods one day shouting murder, the shirt fairly whipped off his back. He assured me it had been done by a coach-whip snake that had wrapped itself round his leg and thrashed him over the shoulders; but uncharitable people suspected it had been done by Judge Lynch!

The same man went to the late Judge Daniel to complain of these accusations, and to ask his advice. "Well," said the Judge, "I will tell you what to do. If you feel innocent, face these charges like a man. But if you are guilty, get into Louisiana as soon as you can." That evening his client crossed Pearl River, and became a citizen of our sister State.

Having recruited at this pleasant anchorage, I bid adieu to my friend Breeland, and set out for the village of Augusta, bowling merrily along in my blood-red buggy. The road is beautiful, roofed over with trees and tendrils, and the air fragrant with the breath of flowers. There was, however, one drawback to my comfort—myriads of flies of every species, that swarmed around and ravenously cupped the blood from my horse. It was what is appropriately termed here "fly time"—that is to say, the period when this numerous family of scourges have it all their own way, and neither man nor beast can sojourn in the woods without much suffering. Now the deer plunge into deep pools and lakes, leaving only their heads exposed, and browse only during a portion of the night while these insects sleep. The cattle from a thousand hills seek the abodes of man, and huddle around some smoking pine or in some open field to escape their tormentors.

On a sudden curve of the road I found myself near one of these "stamping grounds," and a simultaneous roar from five hundred infuriated animals gave notice of my danger. It is well known that the Spanish matadores provoke the wounded bulls in the arena by flaunting the moleta or blood-red flag in their faces. It was the vermillion of my buggy that excited this bellowing herd. They snuffed the air, planted their heads near the ground, tore it up with their hoofs and horns, and glared at me with savage eyes. The fierce phalanx blocked the road, and it was the "better part of valor" to retreat. The instant I wheeled the pursuit commenced. A cloud of dust enveloped them, and the trampling of their feet was like the roll of thunder. My horse dashed forward frantic with terror, and on they plunged on every side, crushing down the brush-wood in their course, goring and tumbling over each other, filling the forest with their dreadful cries, and gathering nearer and nearer in the fearful chase. The struggle now became desperate. In five minutes we should have been overturned and trampled to death: but at this juncture Tom threw out my overcoat, and with an awful clamor they paused to fight over it, and to tear it into shreds. Driving at full speed, I directed Tom to toss out the cushion. The infuriated devils trampled it into atoms, and came charging on, their horns clashing against the buggy, and ripping up the ribs of my horse. At this fearful moment we were providentially saved. A huge oak, with a forked top, had fallen by the wayside, and into this I plunged my horse breast-high, and he was safe, the back of the buggy being then the only assailable point. At this the whole column made a dash, but I met the foremost with six discharges from my revolver; two bottles of Cognac were shattered on their foreheads; next a cold turkey; and, finally, a bottle of Scotch snuff—the last shot in the locker! This did the business. Such a sneezing and bellowing was never heard before; and the one that got the most of it put out with the whole troop at his heels, circling round, scenting the blood of the wounded, and shaking the earth with their thundering tramp.

I was now fairly in for it, and made up my mind to remain until night, when I knew they would disperse. I was relieved, however, by the approach of some cattle-drivers, who, galloping up on shaggy but muscular horses, with whips twenty feet long, which they manage with surprising dexterity, soon drove the belligerent herd to their cowpens, for the purpose of marking and branding. This is done every year in "fly time." The cattle ranging over an area of thirty square miles are now easily collected, driven to a common pen or pound, when the respective owners put their mark and brand on the increase of the season. Thus this Egyptian plague is turned to a useful purpose.

I was now approaching the ancient village of Augusta, once the stamping-ground of the famous Coon Morris. Being advised to take a near cut when within three miles, I turned to the right and drove ahead through leafy by-paths and across deserted fields grown over with stunted pines. For three hours I drove about, describing three segments of a circle, and finally got back to the point I started from. [Note bene: Let all travelers stick to the beaten road, for in this country one may travel twenty miles without meeting a traveler or a finger-board.] The country through which I passed was poor, the population sparse, and no indications of the proximity of a town that I had heard of for twenty-five years. I drove on, however, expectation on tip-toe, the sun pouring down vertically, and my flagging steed sinking above his fetlocks in the sand, when, lo! the ancient village stood before me—an extensive parallelogram, garnished round with twelve or fifteen crumbling tenements, the wrecks of by-gone years! Not a tree stood in the gaping square for the eye to rest upon; the grass was all withered up; the burning sun fell on the white and barren sand as on a huge mirror, and was reflected back until your cheeks scorched and your eyes filled with tears. Even of these dilapidated houses several were unoccupied, and we drove round two-thirds of the square before we could find a human being to direct us to the tavern. It was a log-cabin, with one room, a deal table, some benches and cots, and a back shed for kitchen. Stable there was none, nor bar, nor servant, nor landlord visible. I turned my horse on the public square and took peaceable possession of the establishment. Nobody was to be seen. I was hungry and fatigued. The idea of a town once famous, and its hundred-and-one little comforts for the traveler, had buoyed me up during the morning drive, and fancy had diagramed something very different from what I was then realizing. In a few hours, however, the bachelor landlord came in. Not expecting company he had gone out on a foraging expedition. He feasted us on delicious venison, and, being a Virginian, soon concocted an ample julep. The mint grew near the grave of a jolly lawyer, a son of the "Old Dominion," who died there a few years before. No man can live in such a place without losing his energies. The mind stagnates, and in six months one would go completely asleep. I never saw such a picture of desolation. All was silence and solitude. In reply to my inquiry, my old friend, Colonel Mixon, said that times were dull; there was a little activity in one line only; and hobbling off he soon returned with a pair of babies in his arms—twin gems, plump, blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked, hanging around his neck like flowers on the stump of a storm-battered oak. Counselor Barrett, who seemed thoroughly posted in this branch of statistics, informed me that, during the last twelve months, thirteen matrons of that vicinity had produced doublets! The Colonel said that any disconsolate pair who would board with him six months, and drink from a peculiar spring on the premises, without having their expectations realized, should have a free ticket at his table for sixty days to try it again.

These infant phenomena, however, are by no means confined to Perry County. East Mississippi every where is equally prolific. In the Pandling Clarion I read the following, from the Rev. Marmaduke Gardiner, of Clarke County:

"FALLING SPRING, Feb. 2.

"More than one hundred persons have visited my house since Saturday last, for the purpose of seeing three beautiful boy babies which my wife gave birth to on the 28th ult. One weighs $7\frac{1}{2}$ lbs, the others $6\frac{1}{2}$ each, and are perfectly formed. We have named them Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. I married my wife twenty years ago, and she has given me nine sons and nine daughters, but no triplicates until the last."

Married couples in search of heirs often cross the Atlantic, or drag themselves with nostrums and stinking mineral waters, when a single summer in these pine-woods would accomplish what they desire without extraordinary efforts, and at one-twentieth of the expense.

The old town next day presented a more lively scene. That certain premonitory of a "play-woods" gathering, the beer and ginger-bread cart, came rumbling into the square. — Rickety vehicles, of odd shapes, laden with melons, trundled along behind. A corner shanty displayed several suspicious-looking jugs and kegs. Buck negroes, dressed in their holiday suits, strode in, looking about for the candidates as one would for the giraffe. No candidate except the Hon. Robert J. Walker had visited the defunct town for years. It was quite an event. Finally, the stout sovereigns from the country came in, and the comedy commenced. The largest portion of the crowd was in the court-house to hear the orators, but a pretty considerable group was posted about the doggery. A number were playing "old sledge" on the heads of empty whisky barrels, and others were discussing the preliminaries of a quarter race.

Three of the candidates had spoken, when the late Judge Mitchell (formerly a well-known Member of Congress from Tennessee) rose. After an elaborate reply to the arguments of two of them, he turned to the third, and laying his hand on his head, said, "I have only one word to say in answer to my young friend. He has a little soft spot right here, and it is mushy all round it."

When R. J. Walker was canvassing against George Poindexter for the Senate, he was accompanied, said Colonel Nixon, by a queer fish, one Isaac M'Farren, a fellow of infinite jest, and whose countenance was a comedy of itself. On a certain occasion they put up with a new settler, and had to sleep on the floor, while the man and his wife occupied a bunk in the same room. A very buxom damsel slept in a small kitchen near by. Mac had cast sheep's eyes at her, and being uncomfortable on the floor, concluded to go and whisper a few soft nothings in her ear. He slipped out very quietly; but it being a crispy and frosty night, the door of the kitchen creaked upon its hinges, and the woman exclaimed, "Husband! husband! one of them men's arter Sally!" He sprang up, seized his rifle, and was rushing out, when Mr. Walker seized his arm. M'Farren hearing the noise, appeared at the other door rather en dishabille. "Je-men-y!" cried the man, and cocked his rifle. Mr. Walker threw it up, and Mac, running forward, seized him by the hand, exclaiming, "Sir, it is only a frolic and an indiscretion; I am a man of honor, incapable of injuring sleeping innocence. Sir, I throw myself on your generosity. I see that you belong to the honorable fraternity of free and accepted masons. Brother, I give you the right hand of fellowship!" The man was overwhelmed with this volubility, and flattered at the notion of being mistaken for a mason. He accompanied the party over the county, but finally voted the Poindexter ticket, because Walker would persist in running when M'Farren was the proper man for the place!

THE HURRICANE.

BARRETT AND THE BOAR.

"I was in —," said Counselor Barrett, "when Governor —, who was a candidate for re-election, came there. The county had been recently organized, and few of the people had been there long enough to vote under the Constitutional provision which requires six months' residence in the county and twelve in the State. They were anxious to vote, and got up a petition to the Board of Police (which has the supervision of elections) to dispense with the requisitions of the Constitution."

"Did the Board comply with the petition?"

"I can't exactly say," said the Counselor; "but as they all voted, I presume the order was duly made. The best of the joke was, the Governor signed the petition!"

Next day the Counselor accompanied me a few miles on my way. Showing me a road running down toward the swamp, he inquired if I knew how that road came to be made. On replying that I did not, he said: "Some years ago I was down in that swamp with some fellows after wild hogs. I was standing on the edge of it hallooing on the bounds, my gun resting against a tree, when out rushed an enormous bear and charged right at me. I could only straddle my legs to escape his furious onset; but as he passed under, being rather low in the crotch, I found myself astride of him. Almost unconscious from terror, I involuntarily seized his tail, and stuck my heels under his shoulders. At every stride he took my spurs goaded him on. Thus he ran some three miles through the brushwood, making a clean sweep as he went, but finally fell exhausted, when I dispatched the monster with my hawie-knife. The road is now used for hauling timber from Leaf River swamp, and is called Barrett's trail."

The country through which I am journeying is sparsely settled, and is only adapted to grazing. Its surface undulates like the roll of the ocean, and hill and valley are covered with luxuriant grass and with flowers of every hue. Herds of cattle stand in the plashy brooks. Red deer troop along the glades; wild turkeys run before you along your road, and the partridge rises from every thicket. But for these the solitude would be painful. Settlements are often twenty miles apart; the cheering mile-post and gossiping wayfarer are rarely met with. The gaunt pines have a spectral aspect, and their long shadows fall sadly upon the path. At nightfall, when the flowers have faded away, no fire-flies gem the road; one hears no tinkling bell; the robber owl skims lazily by; fantastic shades chase each other into deeper gloom; and instead of "the watch-dog's cheerful cry," the "wolf's long howl" comes from the reed-brakes, and is echoed by its prowling mate on the neighboring hills.

The day was dark and lowering. For weeks nor rain nor gentle dews had refreshed the caliced earth. A heavy cloud hung overhead, and its pent-up fury burst upon the forest. The few birds that tenant these silent woods flew screaming to their eyries; some cattle dashed across the hills for shelter. The whole wilderness was in motion. The pines swayed their lofty heads, and the winds shrieked and moaned among the gnarled and aged limbs. A few old ones fell thundering down, casting their broken fragments around; and then the hurricane rushed madly on, tearing up the largest trees, and hurling them like javelins through the air. The sky was covered as with a pall; and lurid flashes, like sepulchral lights, streamed and blazed athwart it. The earthquake voice of nature trembled along the ground, and, ere its running echoes died away, came again, crash after crash thundering forth. But at length, as though weary of the agony, it paused, and the phantom clouds scudded away. The scene around was appalling! Hundreds of trees lay prostrate, while, here and there, others stood shivered by the bolt of heaven and smoking with its fires. God preserve me from another ride through these giant pines in such a tempest!

MADELEINE SCHAEFFER.

I.

AT twenty years old Madeleine Schaeffer found herself three against Fate, as Descartes against the murderous suitors: God, I, and my sword—the last a weapon whose fine edge the dull armor of her opponent had already partly turned. In other parlance, she had not a friend in the world, and had forgotten how to make one. Born in the faith that the race of Schaeffer crowned humanity, and that, owing to their rare condescension, the rest of creation shared sunlight and starlight, dew and rain, it was a stern teacher that wrought a new creed. In her native village her father ruled supreme, and art and wealth had done their best to make his daughter worthy of her blood; culture and accomplishment could hardly go farther. When at length he looked upon his work, and saw that it was good, there came a great gap into his life—he had met with fulfillment. It was then that a malevolent deity whispered at his ear. His daughter's fortune—was it at all equal to what such a creature had the right to demand? Were there not flocks of golden fleece rambling about the earth, whose rightful shepherds were Schaeffers? And so the simple old country-born-and-bred aristocrat plunged into the vortex of speculation. An excellent nut for Wall Street to crack, and they found the meat sweet! One day he came home to Madeleine with Ruin as plainly lettered on his face as Dante's Omo. It was impossible for him to stay and front the vassals of his little burgh, and so they fled before the sheriff to the city; and there, after two years of hard struggle and much want, the old man died. What little remained in the purse Madeleine spent in conveying the dear form to its rest—that last in the long row of ancestral graves whose sunken stones, wreathed with wild-brier vines and wrought with lichens, slanted and crumbled before the sun and wind of two centuries. Then the coach deposited her at the station once more just as the great, panting train came in. Her foot was on the step before thought struck her, and she paused to ask herself what was to be sought in the city—what but blanker ruin faced her in those swarming lanes? Madeleine drew her shawl about her and moved away. As well die here as there; at least the autumn leaves would drift and mound above her—and the train thundered by. She turned under the late, dull sky, and once more mechanically sought her father's grave. But she did not enter the inclosure, only sat on the low gate-stone, like a sad sphinx to question the passers-by, while twilight hastened up to wrap her in its shadows.

"He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment," she sighed through the stillness.

"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation," said another voice.

Madeleine started; she did not know that she had spoken; and looking up through the gray dampness she saw the old clergyman standing above her. He took her home with him, and had her put to bed and to sleep, and allowed her the refuge of torpor and grief. A friend of his knew of some gay Southern travelers who, at the North in the summer, had desired a governess. A letter came and went with its swift white wings, and Madeleine was checked and ticketed on her way to the Carolinian coast—kindness which the good, glad-giving man could ill afford since the generous Schaeffer title had failed him.

A weary journey both by nights and days—clustering over leagues of pine barrens—conching through everglades that were sloughs of despond—skirting luxury, thrift, and squalor—at length they plunged into an almost unbroken forest, hung with long veils of bleached moss, and Madeleine found herself the solitary female on the deck of a crazy little steamer bound down river. She drew her veil over her face, and sat apart on the deck, for there remained no great distance before her. Approaching it, her future, that she had kept resolutely out of mind, now rose and refused to be dwarfed. It was an ugly sight to her; her sensitive pride, her inborn hauteur recoiled; yet it was work, and to meet it she summoned endurance. Sitting there, she watched the banks of the narrow channel down

Dear "Red,"

I know you have given up on me by now. But don't underestimate when I finally get around to doing my work.

Most of this information you may already have by now but some is new to all of us.

We believe that Azeriel McKenzie's family came from South Carolina but don't get ~~believe~~ the date on the Marker at Humiano because we know they were in Miss for the 1850 Census. But on to what we believe, Azeriel had five brothers, one settled near McComb, one near Dexter, one at Hattiesburg, one unknown and Azeriel at Humiano Creek after staying around Thomas, La for awhile. His first wife is buried there in an unmarked grave.

He also had at least 2 sisters, one (maybe Elizabeth) married a Carter (maybe George) who drove a ~~the~~ wagon for Azeriel from S.C. ~~from~~ from what I can remember.

One named Thomas I Breland but her first name is unknown to me.

There were four children of this union;

David Alexander Breland, Nancy R. Breland Taylor, (Harriet) Lucretia Breland Patsman, and Martha J. (nothing is known about her yet except she may have married a Tullas or Jones or both - Uncle "Jack" A. W. remembers ^(Uncle Cassie says she married a Trimbley) we are related to the Jones but not how).

I am enclosing the info that I have on the above, plus my grandfather A. Zerk Breland, my father Rufus E. Breland, and wish you luck.

Love,
Charlotte B. King

As you can see I didn't mail this ~~letter~~ letter because I had to get some more copies for you.

While I was getting them made, things happen at home and I had to put off this until now.

Hope this will be some help to you.

Dear Pat,

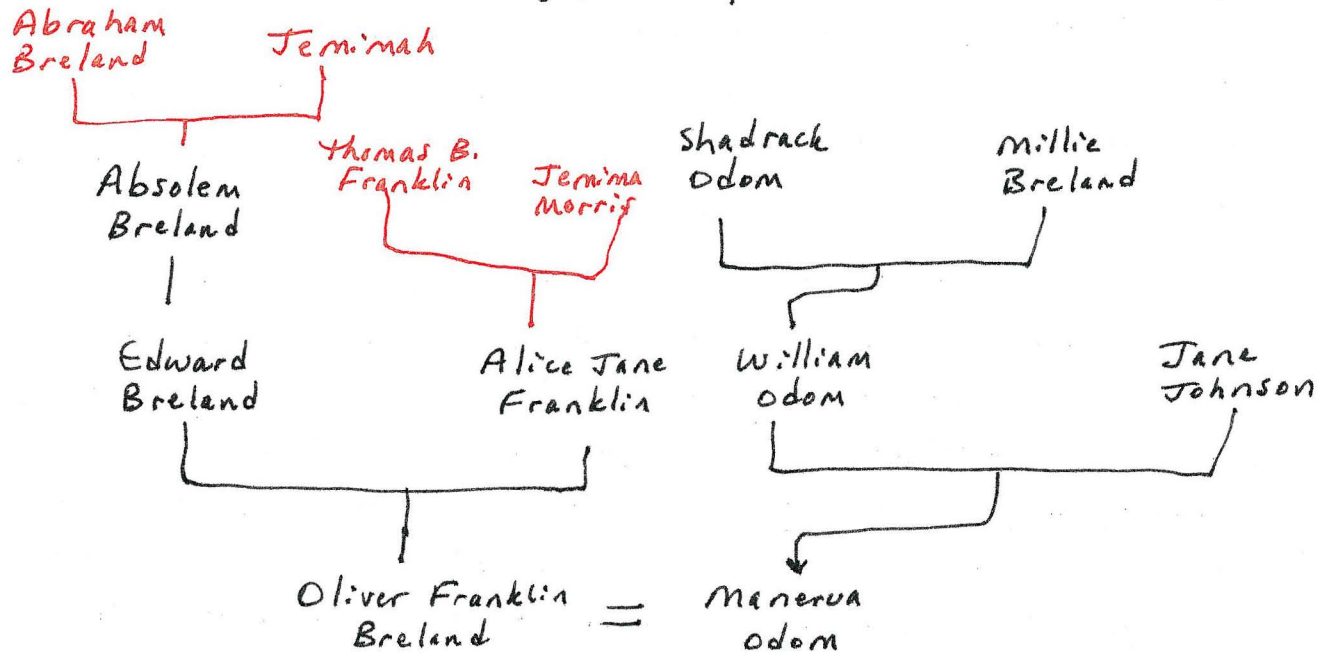

Thank you very much for your letter.

I had sent Jean Strickland some data on my Houston Ancestors of Wayne Co. a couple of years ago but perhaps I have more material you could use. Unfortunately, I am leaving tomorrow for a month-long trip and it will be late June before I can send you copies of ancestor lists, etc. I won't forget to do it when I return.

I have been in contact with most Breland researchers. I know that Judge Ruth Reeves has written a book that claims Abraham Breler (father of most of the Brelands in Beaufort Co., SC from which the Mississippi Brelands descend) was a native of Germany and traces him back a few generations. She gave no proof for these claims & seems to have simply taken the word of a German genealogist who waste her offering to do family research. I have corresponded with Ruth and she seems to be basing her belief in the work on the basis of the similarity in the names Breler & Brieling. The "Tradition" in my family is that the Brelands were from the Braclands (lowlands) of Scotland & there are many Breland families in Scotland today. Associated with Abraham Breland in North Carolina before he moved to South Carolina was a family whose last name was Bryley. I'm attempting to see if they were connected in some way. I'm very much a skeptic when it comes to genealogy & don't believe things without considerable proof.

my great-great-etc. uncle Robert E. Lee Breland wrote a family history in the 1930's using information he said he obtained from his ~~great~~ mother + ~~great~~ uncle, Manerva Odom + her brother. Manerva was the daughter of William Odom + Jane Johnson. Her husband Oliver Franklin Breland was the son of Edward Breland + Alice Jane Franklin. From Manerva + her brother, Uncle Lee obtained the following "family tree" (in black ink)

Charles Gregory Breland, Breland Families of the U.S. 1755-1850 has shown that Absolom was the son of Abraham Breland + Alice Jane Franklin is known to be the daughter of Thomas B. Franklin + Jeremiah Morris (James Edward Franklin, the Family and Ancestry of Sims Kelly Franklin, etc.). I have had DAR Supplementals accepted to Abraham Breland + Thomas B. Franklin. Charles Gregory Breland also believes that Millie is the daughter of Abraham but has no proof. The DAR has not accepted my line to Shadrack Odom. Despite the fact that William Odom's brother Shadrack was his bondsman when he married and that William + Jane had a son Shadrack, they aren't willing to take Page 187 of 240 Lee's report that his mother said her grandparents were Shadrach Odom & Millie Breland as sufficient "proof." Shadrach apparently died soon after his children's birth and Millie remarried to Matthew Cook & came to Mississippi. I'm still doing what I can on this line but frankly doubt I'll get anywhere (unless somebody finds a family Bible or something similar.)

In addition to Shadrach & Manerva, William Odom's children include Samantha, Eveline (m. James Rayburn Cooksey), Nancy, Eli, Samuel, & James H. I'll send you a Family Group Sheet that includes these, as well as all my Breland, Odom, etc. FG-sheets. Elizabeth Shown Mills (Editor, Nat. Gen. Soc. Quarterly) is a descendant of William's son Shadrach & has quite a bit on his descendants.

I think you'll enjoy living in Hattiesburg. My father was Dean of William Carey College (while I was in school at Mississippi College & Tulane University) but I spent quite a bit of time there.

Mr. or Mrs. Strickland,

An acquaintance of mine recently told me about your genealogy work. Her name is Sylvia Ryan. She also gave me a list of your books, and said you were very helpful with enquiries. My son's maternal genealogy lies precisely in the area of Miss. that you have researched. I am enclosing the four generation charts of both of his maternal grandparents.

Much of my sources are family memories, but I have corroborated some of my information using Miss. censuses. On the chart with the Daughdrills, Brelands, and Moss I have the most difficulty. Eugene Breland and Ira Daughdrill I believe were common law spouses and separated shortly after the birth of Hermer Lee Daughdrill. I believe Eugene Breland remarried in the Green Co, Miss. area.

Due to the age difference between Wm. T. Daughdrill and Etta Moss I wonder if she was his second wife. I know some of these people had relatives in Alabama, possibly in Washington Co. I see you've done work there also.

Can you help me with any of this? Mrs. Ryan is going to lend me her copy of Green Co. Marriages she purchased from you. I'm thinking of getting the book on Perry Co. Mar. Do you know if any of these persons were in the Revolutionary war or civil war? I have more Roger's farther back but no evidence on lineage. Yesterday I gave your address to a Mr. Voyles who will probably also be writing you soon as his family came from Tishomingo Co. Miss. Any information you have will be appreciated. Mrs. Ryan said you made xerox's for her. I will be glad to reimburse you for copies made.

As I have a limited budget I can only purchase one or two of your texts. I need to know which would be most useful to me. By their nature they appear to be once only type references so I will probably donate them to the Great Falls Genealogy Society.

Thank you,

Early eastern shore Breelands

Breland

For some time now I have been corresponding with Charles G. Breland, 811 Brickell Road, Huntsville, Alabama, 35805. He has contributed a wealth of information concerning the Breland families. In one of his letters he says, "I would like to get responses from descendants who can document the family groups, and will share with anyone interested." The next two articles will consist of information furnished entirely by Breland with few outside comments.

For a summary of data collected on two of his recent trips to South Carolina, the following are some interesting Breland-Breeland origins.

Abraham Breler obtained a land grant of 110 acres in Granville County, St. Peter's Parish on Black Swamp in 1796, and another grant a few years later adjoining the first. He is in the Jury lists for 1778 and 1783 as Brealer and Brelar. Revolutionary War records show that Abraham, Absalom, AMOS, William, Benjamin, and Jacob served or furnished supplies and were from St. Peter's Parish area; Benjamin and Jacob may have died in the War as no further data is found on them.

BRELANDS, RUSHINGS and Thornhills were listed in South Carolina's Beaufort District in 1790, 1800 and 1810. For anyone interested in early St. Peter's Parish, Beaufort District, S.C., Breland recommends the book Two Centuries of Lawtonville Baptists, 1775-1975 by Coy K. Johnston, C1974, available from Mrs. C.F. Bowers, Estill, S.C. 29918. Price is $9.16 including wrapping and postage.

Up to 1784, the name was spelled Breler, Brelar, Brealer, Brealow and possibly with other variations, but not yet Breland or Breeland. In 1784 land grants of 200 acres for Amos Breland and 640 acres for Abraham Breland were surveyed in Beaufort District, St. Peter's Parish; Amos's land bordered on lands of Abraham Breland Sr.; Abraham's 640 (presumed Junior) bordered on Amos's land. It is not clear whether these lands were on Back Swamp or Boggy Gutt.

In 1787, a grant of 340 acres was surveyed for Abraham Breler on Boggy Gut., which current maps show as located in Hampton County near Shirley Community, and indicates a "Breeler Field Cemetery" near Shirley on a branch of Boggy Swamp.

The 1790 census lists six "Breelo" families in Beaufort District: Abraham, Abraham, Absolem, Amos, Samuel and William. Elisha Breler was in N.C. in Anson County.

This Elisha Breler was in Anson County, North Carolina in 1778 and 1780, and in the 1790 census.

It is well to note at this time that in the 1850 census for Pike County, Lydia Breland (wife of William Thornhill) is listed as 83 and born in North Carolina. Also James M. Breland is aged 64 and he is listed as born in North Carolina

Dell Clawson

William. In 1802, Absolum Breler obtained a grant of 60½ acres on Boggy Gutt bordering on lands of Abraham Breler (Senior). Elisha Breland was a messenger from Pipe Creek Baptist Church to the Savannah Association in 1808, 1809, 1811 and 1816. In 1809, David Breland and his family obtained a passport from the State of Georgia to pass through the Creek Indian Nation.

In 1810, the following Breland families are listed in the census in Beaufort District, St. Peter's Parish: Abraham, Absolem, Amos, Elisha, and Absolem Jr. and Jamie, believed to be the widow of Abraham Sr. William is not listed but is found later in Barnwell District, and in 1811 Abraham Jr. received a passport to pass through Indian lands.

There is indication that the Breland-Rushing-Thornhill-Lewis families were associated with Welsh Neck Baptists on the Pee Dee River prior to their close association in Beaufort District, beginning in 1769. Charles Breland has found a Jacob Breland who petitioned for land on the Pee Dee River in Craven County, South Carolina as early as 1755.

More on the migrations of these families to Mississippi in the next issue.

James M. Breland came to Mississippi from South Carolina prior to 1820 when he was recorded in the Pike County census - where he was 34, with a wife (Frances) who was 28, and a son under 10 (who may have been Thomas), a daughter under 10, and a female 16-26. Children born in Mississippi include Richard E., Caroline, Galitia (?) A., Sarah, Ebenezer R., Reuben, William C., Salina A., and Mary.

Thomas Breland (who is mentioned as possibly a son of this James M. Breland) married a McKenzie. (Note that in the passports issued by the Governors of Georgia, two McKenzie families also left South Carolina in 1811, the same time the Absolem and Abraham Breland families left, and they too were from Beauford District. In one case the origin is listed as St. Peter's District which must mean St. Peter's Parish. Be certain to check the two.

preceding articles concerning this).

Both Thomas Breland and his wife met untimely deaths before 1850, leaving Martha Jane, Nancy R., David Alexander and Lucretia Ann Breland who were living with three McKinsy families in 1850. (Please refer to Article of Jan. 15th concerning these, also.)

RICHARD E. was unmarried in 1850. Caroline married Thomas E. Bridges in 1852. Galitia (?) A. may have been Lucretia A. who married W.C. Tate. James H. and his wife Frances, while in Pike County, were members of the New Zion Baptist Church; later they moved to Amite Co. and were members of the Line Creek Baptist Church, along with Sarah, Ruben and Salina.

Ebenezer R., Ruben, and William C. served in the Civil War. Mary was six years old in 1850. James M. Breland was a messenger from the Line Creek Baptist Church to the Miss. River Association several years in the decade 1850-60. He died in 1864 in Amite County, where estate papers were filed.

Of these four men to come to Mississippi from South Carolina, we can give no definite relationship. Because of their history it is apparent they were all closely related. Guess-timation would put their birth dates, as approximately, David, 1774, Abraham and Absolem (know to be brothers), 1761, and James, 1786.

Charles Breland of Huntsville has been very gracious to share all of this research with us and we are very thankful. Those of you who wish to share with him can write to him directly at 811 Brickell Road, Huntsville, Alabama, 35895.

MRS. CHARLOTTE B. King, 3101 Massachusetts, Kenner, La. 70062 also sends all of the information she has been able to collect on the Breland children who were raised by the McKenzie family. These were the children of Thomas I. Breland as mentioned above.

David Alexander Breland born 9 Aug. 1847, died 29 Jan. 1917, married Harriet Angeline Holmes. They had ten children: John Thomas, A. Zurl, Needham Alexander, Mary E. "Molly", Isaac D., a baby that died in 1882, Leslie Henry, Cole D., Elisha Holmes, and Minnie Bell Breland.

Nancy R. Breland married Leonard Taylor; Harriet (Lucretia) Bredland

married Benjamin Passman. Martha Breland may have married a Tullios Jones or both. Earlier reports had dicated that Martha J. Breland had married first a Lloyd and second Grimsley - so you see how mixed these things can become.

If any of your records offer me information please share it with me. The records may be in some McKenz family bibles, since these four Breland children were raised by their mother people. (See article of March 6, 1980 for more on this family.

QUERIE: Sharon Nettles, 544 Briarfield Road, Jackson, Ms. is interested in identifying Simeon Boyd born in 20 May, 1811. Simeon Boyd married Alaline Boyd who was born Dec., 1824. They are both buried down at Carter's Creek. They settled the old homestead where Sharon grew up in what is now Lawrence County. Sharon was interested in the Boyd article of March 19th.

Mrs. Carolyn Garner of P.O. Box 1632, Irving, Texas 75060, is searching for information on Robert M. Blyth born in Tennessee in 1820, and his wife Louesa born 1826 in Georgia. Their children were: John N., L., Robert J. Martha L., Elijah L., and Calhoun, a born in Mississippi.

Karen Kay Esberger, Box 116 Midlothian, Texas 76065, needs the parents of Theophilus Branch (born 1822 in Mississippi, died 1895 in Winn Parish, Louisiana and of his wife Mary D., born 1834 in Mississippi and died 1914 in Winn Parish. They had moved to Winn Parish by 1860.

By Dell Clawson

In the January 31st issue we had a query for John L. Breland of Williamsburg, Virginia.

Breland sent some additional notes about his family and then I made a few calls, did a bit of checking up. Then thanks to Mrs. Charlotte King, 3101 Mass. Ave., Kenner, La. 70062 and her researcher uncle, R.M. Lewis, Sr. of 6034 Revere Place, Dallas, Texas, 75206, we were able to send Breland the information about his grandfather. He sends his thanks to all of us.

If you have been saving these articles, you will be able to refer back to them as answers are found. I will refer to former queries from time to time and am glad that some of you are cutting out the column each week and saving it.

The publications, addresses and answers, as well as "ground-rules" will be worth collecting for future use. I am using material for you now that I have collected for 20 years and many of you are aware of this because of our personal letters.

I am certain that John L. Breland, known as "Red" Breland by some will want to share this information with his Walthead County friends. His father was Leslie Henry Breland and his mother was Emma Myrtis Brumfield, daughter of Davis Brumfield. All he knew when he first wrote to me was that his grandfather Alex Breland lived part of his life in the Salem Community.

We have now sent him his ancestry back four generations on some lines and here's his grandfathers family:

David Alexander Breland born 9 Aug. 1847, d-29 Jan. 1917 and his wife Harriet Angeline Holmes born 29 April 1847, d-18 Mar. 1930 are both buried at Union Baptist Church Cemetery. David was the son of Thomas I. Breland and Harriet Holmes was the daughter of Elisha Holmes, Jr. and Mary Roberts.

David and Harriet Breland had the following children:

1. John Thomas Breland born 1870 married Harrett E. Duncan
2. A. Zerl Breland born 1873 married Florence Ophelia Tony
3. Needham Alexander Breland born 1875 married Mary Thornhill
4. Mary E. Breland born 1877 married Jasper Rushing
5. Isaac D. Breland born 1880 died at age of 20
6. Baby died in 1882
7. Leslie Henry Breland born 1883 m-Euna Myrtis Brumfield
8. Cole D. Breland born 1886 married Effie Thomas
9. Elisha Holmes Breland born 1888 m-Ollie May
10. Minnie Bell Breland born 1891 m-Noel Crockran, Elmer Jones and she married a third time but husband's name unknown.

I hope this information spurs others of the family to help with this history. My grandfather, Alex Brumfield, lived in the Salem Community and I remember that he was well known to this Breland family.

ADDITIONAL QUERIES: Mr. John L. Breland's other grandfather was Davis Brumfield who married Millie Ann Rushing. Her father was Levi Rushing. Has anyone done any research on the Rushing family? Who was Levi Rushing and what was his wife's name?

R. M. Lewis, Sr., (mentioned in first paragraph) researching his wife's line asks the following questions concerning his extensive Breland research: "Thomas Breland-Breland of S.C. came to Mississippi ca 1836-8 and married a Miss McKenzie-McKenzy. Children born in Mississippi between 1838-1847 were Martha J., Nancy R., David Alexander and Lucretia A. Breland, not necessarily in that order.

Parents died within four days of each other at or near birth of fourth child. The 1850 census of Pike County, Mississippi shows David and Lucretia living with a Nathan McKenzie. Martha J. with AZERL McKenzie and Nancy R. with Ara McKenzie. The 1860 census of Mississippi lists Nathan McKenzey and family of Columbia, Marion county and AZAREL McKenzie and family at Holmesville, Pike Co. ARA McKenzie is not found in either Pike or Marion, neither are the four Breland children.

Where are Thomas Breland and his wife buried? What was his wife's full name? Was David Alexander Breland born 1845 (per 1850 census) or 9 Aug. 1847 per tombstone in Union Baptist Church cemetery near Tylertown?

Of the four children listed in this query you will note that the David Alexander Breland family is given above. Lewis also states that Martha J. married a Lloyd and a Grimsley; Nancy R. married a Taylor and Lucretia married a Passman. Perhaps some descendants of these families can help answer these questions.

Mrs. John C. Copes III, 2750 McConnell Drive, Baton Rouge, La. 70809 is descended also from the John Carney-Ikenaby line and shared her connection with me. She is also interested in corresponding with folks on the Bateman, Mullins and Reid families. She will share with anyone on these lines. These families also have Lawrence County connections.

David Breland left South Carolina in 1809 for Amite County, Miss. (Note: Passports issued by the Governors of Georgia record that he received passport on Monday, 17 April 1809 for himself and his family. The passport record also indicated that he was from South Carolina and recommended a man of good character by Malichi Rushing, Willis Smith, Benjamin Lanier and Murray Reed).

He was about 35 and his family included his wife Edith, David Jr., Daniel, James C., Katy and Edy. Children born in Mississippi included Marian and another daughter named either Nancy or Mary Ann.

David and Edith were members of the Zion Hill Baptist Church in Amite County. By 1830, they were in Copiah County and probably died there.

David Jr. lived in Pike County and Copiah County. Daniel served in the Miss. Militia in 1814-15 and later lived in Copiah County. James C. was a constable in Holmesville in 1820. James Johnson in Amite County in 1818. Marian joined the Zion Hill Baptist Church in Amite County in 1828; whether she married or not is unknown. Nancy married William Day in Copiah County in 1830 and Mary Ann married John Moore Jr. in Copiah County, also in 1830.

Abraham Breeland left South Carolina in 1811 for Pike County, Miss. (passport granted 16 Feb. 1811 for himself, wife and six children, along with one Drue Tilly, wife and child, and a Mrs. Sarah Rodgers, a widow with seven children and one slave - all from Beaufort District, S.D.)

According to our contributor, Charles Breland, Abraham was then about 50 years old and his family included his second wife Elizabeth Albert, Hillery and John Robertson Breland, children by his first wife, and Lydia and a son and another daughter by his second wife. The migration group seems to have been made up of about 60 people and to have included Thornhills, Cooks, Odoms, Rodgers, Johnstons, and other families and slaves.

William Thornhill brought his wife Liddy Breland (sister of Abraham) five children and his wife's mother. (On Saturday, 2 March 1811, passports were granted to William along with William Odum, Joseph Thornhill with wife and six slaves, another William Thornhill and Robert Thornhill) The party also included Millie Breland Odom Cook, another sister of Abraham.

ABRAHAM DIED before 1830, Elizabeth died in Pike County after 1850. Albert is believed to have been killed by an Indian before 1820. Hillery served in the Miss. Militia in 1814-15 and, in 1818, married Ailey Brown in Pike County. John Robertson Breland served in the La. Drafter Militia in 1814-15 and settled in St. Tammany Parish, La., later moved to Pike County, until about 1855 when he returned to St. Tammany and died there in 1875. Lydia married Micajah Ballard in St. Tammany in 1831.

Abraham's party in 1811 also included young Edward Breland, a son of Absolem, who was a brother of Abraham. Absolem may have been in the migration party; if so, he returned to South Carolina. Edward married Alice (Jane) Franklin in St. Tammany in 1824; then located in Copiah County and later Newton County. Edward's sons and grandsons included several Baptist preachers - one in particular, Robert Lee Breland, was a State Senator.

Well, it seems that this Breland Saga is going to take three articles instead of two so watch again for the next when we will continue with James M. Breland. One note, however, according to Charles Breland, there were other sons of Absolem Breland, mentioned above who settled in Mississippi in addition to Edward. These include Elisha Hiram, Samuel Absolem Jr. who settled in Greene County and Jesse who settled in Jackson County before 1825. Breland states that most of his facts are documented, but that some of the assignments of children to parents may have errors. He would appreciate responses from descendants. He has data on families of Hillery, John R. and Edward he would be happy to share.

QUERIE: Bet you didn't know this. The Tylertown Times got all the way to Seoul, Korea, but Col. Alfred L. Lambert is serving with the U.S. Air Force there and he sends his querie. He is searching his family history and has requested information from the Walthall County citizens. He is the son of Jewel (Wheat) Lambert, and grew up in the Darbun Community.

His grandparents were Joseph B. Wheat and Susie L. Conerly, and their parents were William (Bill) Wheat and Francis E. Pigott, and William (Bill) Conerly and Abigail Regan. He is particularly interested in finding out more information regarding William Wheat and Francis E. Pigott's ancestry.

If any of you have any information you'd like to share with him, you may send (to me or) directly to him care of Col. Alfred L. Lambert, JUSMAG-MKAF, APO San Francisco, Calif. 96302. (I have already sent him the Conerly information he needed.)

Correspondence welcome: Send Self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dell Clawson, 4636 Rosalia Drive, New Orleans, La. 70127. Queries are free, but must have a Walthall-Marion-Pike County connection. Some will be answered personally but most through the column when interest is warranted.

ficiently so to avoid the baits of corn that are laid for them, and which, with the gun or trap, secure their destruction by the hundred. They are also deceived by the call which the hunters make by means of a whistle, formed out of the wing-bone of the same fowl. They spend their days in the enjoyment of the happiest freedom, and, on returning to their roosts at night, never fail to have at least one sentinel on duty. The average weight of the female turkey in Mississippi is estimated at twelve pounds, and that of the male at twenty pounds. Deer and turkeys are the two most profitable kinds of game now hunted on the upper waters of the Pascagoula; but to those who fancy them—and who does not?—the sport of quail-shooting is inexhaustible. Those who enjoy the killing of ugly creatures can there amuse themselves by hunting wild-cats; and those who have the good sense to appreciate a roasted opossum can here luxuriate on them to perfection.

Of all the places in the South where the people suffer for the want of good, wholesome bread, none of them can exceed the southeastern section of Mississippi, and yet the meaning of the Indian word Pascagoula is, the place where they make bread. My last news from that region was, that five grown-up sons of the spar-cutting nabob had entered the Confederate army, only one of whom survived.

THE THREE BROTHERS.

BY MRS. OLIPHANT, AUTHOR OF "THE CHRONICLES OF CARLINGFORD,"
"THE BROWNS," ETC.

CHAPTER XXXI.—BROTHERLY ADVICE.

NEXT day, however, Frank Renton was full of many thoughts.

I doubt whether it is in my power to give any clear impression of the reflections naturally produced in a young man's mind by the first suggestion of marrying money. In ordinary cases, marriage is not the object set before the youth—the purpose contemplated from the beginning of an acquaintance. He is attracted by some stranger, whose name he never heard before, perhaps, and of whose existence, previous to the eventful hour which brought them together, he had no knowledge; chance or inclination brings them together; the germ warms, quickens, bursts into flower. Love comes spontaneous, unsought, perhaps almost unwelcome, and marriage becomes but a necessary accident in its course. But to approach that idea of marriage in cold blood, and without any soft compulsion of feeling, is a very different matter. It is a thing which women are called upon to do every day; but it is not so inevitable among men. It had been brought before Frank in what seemed a very distinct way. True, Nelly Rich was a little flirt, almost confessedly avenging herself on the world for her father's uncomfortable position, and the spurns her family were subject to, by doing as much harm as she could among the men who ate Mr. Rich's dinners and laughed at him. She had no money upon them, and more than one, within the knowledge even of the battalion at Royalborough, who had supposed themselves sure of Nelly and her fortune, had been ignominiously turned off when the crisis came. This very fact naturally made Frank think the more of the impression, which all his comrades informed him he had produced. Fifty thousand pounds down, and some further share, in all probability, when the father and mother died, not to speak of Nelly herself—pretty, and bright, and amusing, and clever, as she was. The idea, as was natural, awoke many reflections in the young soldier's mind. I have said that he had not suffered by his father's death; but yet had he meant to remain in his present position at home, no doubt Frank would have shared in the disadvantages which his brothers had felt so keenly; and to have it in his power at twenty to secure his own comfort for life without any particular trouble, was a dazzling prospect. It is not to be supposed by this that Frank had developed at so early an age the mercenary instincts of a fortune-hunter; on the contrary, the good things which the gods seemed thus to have placed within his reach, gave him a shock rather than a thrill of satisfaction. He had no wish to marry—to plunge into serious life at his age, and give up the wayward ways of youth. The idea would never have entered his mind, had he been left to himself. But when a young man sees such a golden apple nodding at him from an accessible bough, and thinks he has but to put forth his hand and secure to himself at one stroke all the advantages of wealth, the sensation is a startling one. He went about thoughtful for two days, turning it over and over in his mind. It is true, he did not think very much about Nelly. She was very nice, very jolly, and a man need not fear to have a dull companion for life, whom duty called upon to marry Mr. Rich's daughter; but the truth was, that she did not count for very much in the matter. Frank was honest with himself, and affected no delusion on that subject; but then he had heard of people marrying money all his life without any particular reprobation. Many men had done it, as he knew, who got on very well with their wives, and made admirable husbands. In-hand into his pocket, and drew out a bundle of notes, which he gave to Gunnison:

"There it is, Bob. I don't deserve to live; I hope I shan't!"

"By Jove, that's a fact! It's as shameful a trick as I ever heard of," shouted Widden.

"Hold your tongue!—Come, Jarvis, get up. You deserve a sounder punishment than I shall have the heart to give. As it is, there's not a bit of extenuation for you. You are accidentally discovered, and I'm inclined to think are ten times more frightened than sorry. You must sit down and write the whole story out without delay."

It was some time before Jarvis could compose himself sufficiently for the task; but, driven by Gunnison, who was really angry, he sat down at a table in the corner, and we soon heard the hesitating scratching of his pen, while Gunnison stood close beside him, watching his work.

We were nearly stupefied at the turn which affairs had taken, and stared blankly at each other until the culprit had completed his task, and had read it in a trembling voice. It was in substance what we had been acquainted with by the dialogue we had just heard.

Gunnison, with a promptness and decision we never saw before in him, asked for Jarvis's hat, which he placed on the owner's head, at the same time reaching his own:

"Good-by, boys, for to-night. Jarvis and I are going to get the goods back before they are got out of the way. I shall be at the office in the morning, and maybe they'll let me bring my inkstand and traps back again; but, as for Jarvis, I don't know—"

"I can't go back. I am not so bad, but I know plain enough what I've been nigh doing for Bob; but—but I would like it if you fellows would only shake hands with me."

Who could help it? Even Widden struck his palm so heartily that the poor wretch sobbed afresh, and we made no bones of being a little soft all around, in spite of his uncles in the flour-trade and his horrible taste. So he went away, and we, wondering and gossiping, applied ourselves again to the punch and the entertaining jargon of the cripple, who had risen to high consideration in our eyes for his manipulation of the case. He said:

"I heard the conversation just as you heard it, and when brother Bob—and a fine, good-hearted brother he is, too—when he told me why he was dismissed, and described the boys in the office, I thought I knew one of them was the chap I had seen talking with Turber in my place. Turber didn't use exactly the words that Bob repeated, but the argument was the same. The reason why I played, as you heard me, was to give your different thoughts a common direction, and therefore make you less liable to interrupt me, and also because I knew that Jarvis would remember the player, as he had been the first to applaud me when I played it on the night that I overheard the conversation."

"Egad, though, it was doocid sharp of you," said Widden. "I had some doubts myself about those goods."

"Of course, of course!" roared Battles. "'Behind the plastering, or up the chimney.'"

We set up such a shout that the glasses rang, and Widden got red in the face. We had to tell it all to the cripple, who laughed for the first time in the evening, and from that moment we were the merriest party in the city, except when the splinters of poor Jarvis's shattered glass caught our eyes.

The firm gave us a royal spread the next day, with Bob at the head of the table, and his brother, with his violin, on his right.

A HOME ON THE PASCAGOULA.

IT was before the late rebellion, and the writer was a wanderer among the swamps and pine-forests of Mississippi. Of all the curious homes upon which he stumbled, and where he was hospitably entertained, there was not one, perhaps, more noteworthy than the residence of a wealthy planter and spar-cutter, located on the Pascagoula River. The accompanying picture of the dwelling was taken on the spot, and the subjoined particulars were noted in my journal at the time of my visit.

The estate of this Mississippi yeoman numbered a thousand acres, but his main support was derived from the business of cutting spar-timber, which he hauled to the Pascagoula, floated to the mouth of the stream, and sold to an agent of the French Government. What right our French friends had to carry off this valuable plunder, unless they paid some revenue, I could not understand; but I remember that not more than half a dozen trees, suited for "a mast of some great admiral," were generally found in a square mile of forest, and that the price usually received for a single spar was one hundred dollars. But, as my spar-cutting host was an extensive slave-owner, he devoted a part of his estate to the culture of cotton, and, in the region round about, he was reputed to be worth not far from one hundred thousand dollars; and, while the largest proportion of his slaves lived in cabins adjoining the cotton-lands, his own residence occupied a small open space, directly in the centre of a pine-forest, where the fragrance from the resinous trees kept the air pure and healthy.

His family consisted of a wife and eighteen children. Three of them were girls, whose average weight I estimated at two hundred pounds. They were all performers on the violin and accordeon, and were so fond of dancing that, whenever two or three spar-cutters happened along to join them, they "would dance all night, till broad daylight." Though abundantly able to live in a manner allied to elegance, this family, true to habits which prevail among a large class in the South, could not appreciate the sensation of real comfort. Negroes of all ages were abundant in and about the dwelling, whose market-value, at the time, could not have been less than ten thousand dollars; and yet, with two or three exceptions, wooden benches were used in the place of chairs, one iron spoon answered for the whole family, and the mother, when at the supper-table, added the sugar or "short-sweetening" to the coffee with her fingers, and tasted each cup, to see if it was right, before sending it to its proper destination. Such things as andirons, tongs, and wash-basins, were considered useless, and the bedstead assigned to the guest was a mere board, yet the sheets were charmingly fringed with cotton lace, and in their freshness did not remind one of those alluded to by Izaak Walton. All the family, excepting the parents and two sons, were barefooted, and yet the dancing girls sported finger-rings in abundance, and wore basque dresses of calico. Only two of the eighteen children had ever travelled from home as far as Mobile, and the first crop knew not how to read: the second were more fortunate, for a school had lately been established in a settlement about five miles distant, which consisted of fifteen scholars, seven of whom were the children of the host. He was the postmaster for that region, and the uncalled-for copies of certain weekly papers were used to ornament the walls of the habitation. During one of the nights that I spent under this roof, the "school-master was abroad," for he had come on a visit to the planter's family; the event was celebrated by a jollification which beggars description, and, when he started for his log cabin, which was three miles distant, he went alone through the pathless woods, carrying a gun in one hand, and a pine-torch in the other. In the yard attached to this house, pigs, dogs, geese, and chickens, were abundant, and kept up a perpetual clatter; and, hanging from the beams, or stacked in corners, were no less than thirteen guns.

With regard to the surrounding attractions of this Mississippi home, so far as the glorious pine-woods, the neighboring cypress-swamps, and the abundance of game, were concerned, it would be difficult to exaggerate. From the "lord of the manor" I learned that deer were abundant, but were hunted chiefly by torchlight. He knew a small party who, in a single week, had killed one hundred; and, while he did not think this mode of hunting cruel, he was very severe upon the hunters, because they sometimes killed his cattle instead of the game, by mistaking the shining eyes (the mark shot at) of the one for those of the other. He stated that the deer always ranged through the pine-woods at night for the purpose of feeding, remaining hidden in the swamps during the day; that a good hunter could always tell, by the noise the deer made in leaping, whether he was mortally wounded or not; and that many of them were also killed by still-hunting and driving, but that fire-hunting was the most profitable. In speaking of the habits of the deer, he told me that they were much more tame in summer than in the winter, and that he had often killed them wandering about his cleared fields in company with his cattle; that he has known them to feed upon green corn and upon various kinds of soft-shelled nuts, as well as tender buds and wild grass; that he had witnessed some terrible fights between the bucks, and that fawns, when kindly treated, are easily tamed, but very mischievous. Another very abundant denizen of the Mississippi woods is the wild-turkey. Of these, my host told me that they were exceedingly cunning, but not suf-

The Dantzlars, Dennys, Griffins, and others brought capital which was used later in developing the greatest sawmill complex in the state. Capitalists like Hiram Breland of Greene County had a big stock in the Dantzler enterprises, according to Holt Myers of New Augusta, a descendant of Breland.

"Balance Agriculture with Industry," was born here in our region and it is not surprising that Governor Hugh White, a Piney Woods bred citizen, was the father of the idea in our Mississippi Economy.

Slaves were first used in logging and industry. The mental picture of big plantations with slaves tilling the fields is another stereotyped idea we have of the system. These slaves were farmed out in the woods and along rivers for cutting, rafting, and processing timber for overseas markets. Their owners received as much as $18.00 a month for their services when they were farmed out to others. Many of these, after freedom, went into logging for themselves and some became wealthy in their own name. Wes Fairley and his brother were among them. According to Hickman the drake-tailed-log cart was invented by a slave by the name of Usan Vaughan over on Pearl River.

Mississippi only became poor under a one crop economy which was over emphasized in the region above the timber belt. If a severance tax had been levied on our standing timber during the ante-bellum days northern and western capitalists would not have come in to strip

L. E. Breland, 56, owner of a Lucedale hotel and brother of W. F. Breland of Pascagoula, died early Wednesday morning after the automobile which he was driving crashed into a freight train near the George County seat.

Mrs. Breland's car struck a Mississippi Export Railroad train at a crossing on Highway 15 about two miles from Lucedale, according to reports from the scene of the accident.

Funeral services were conducted yesterday afternoon from the Fails Funeral home in Lucedale with interment in the Fairly cemetery at Deep Creek. Mr. Breland was a member of the Cypress Creek Baptist church.

A building contractor before purchasing the hotel two years ago, Mr. Breland was well known here where his brother is a prominent business man and a son, Oytt, operated a cleaning and pressing establishment in Moss Point for several years.

W. M. Breeland Fatally Injured By Falling Tree

Walter M. Breeland, 44 years old, was fatally injured Sunday morning by a falling tree at his home in Vancleave. He died several hours later at the Biloxi hospital.

Mr. Breeland had walked out in the back lot about 8 a. m., Sunday when a dead tree broke off in the wind and fell, the top or a branch striking him. He was discovered unconscious beside the fallen tree only a few minutes later and was rushed to the hospital. Death was said to be due to internal injuries.

He was a native of Jackson county and had made his home in Vancleave for the past six years. He had been employed at the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation yard in Pascagoula as an expeditor in the sheet metal department for three years.

Funeral services were conducted Monday at 3 p. m. at the Baggett Memorial Methodist church of Vancleave by the Rev. W. J. Walters and interment was in the Vancleave cemetery.

Pall bearers were Clyde Cunningham, Ed. Vaughan, Austin Delancey, B. B. Taylor, Jacob Lockard and Jesse Havens.

Mr. Breeland is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ira Moore Breeland; one son, Walter Breeland, Jr.; a daughter, Frances Moore Breeland of Biloxi and Mrs. O. L. Ladner of Gulfport.

Library system technologies manager achieves certification

Special to The Mississippi Press

PASCAGOULA — Lonnie Breland, Jackson-George Regional Library System technologies manager, has completed the CompTIA Network-plus certification.

He has been with the library system since 2003 and was promoted to manager in 2006.

Breland completed his associate's degree at Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College, Perkinston campus, of networking professionals with at least nine months of in 2003.

Breland

The CompTIA Network+ certification is an international industry credential that validates the knowledge experience in network support or administration.

The certifications are credentials achieved through a testing process and validate knowledge within a specific IT support function.

All CompTIA exams are developed by subject matter experts, and the certifications are recognized throughout the industry as the standard for proving foundation-level skill sets.

I have been unable to trace the Breland name back past Absolom who was born in 1790 in South Carolina but from a study of Census Records it seems fairly certain his father's name was also Absolom. Early census records gave no names or exact ages of the children, listing only the name of head of household. Some sources say the family came from England and some say they came from Scotland. There is no record in England of the name Breland. An old genealogy research firm there states the name is most likely a syncopated form of the English name Bretlande which goes back to William Bretlande of Thorncliffe in Chester County England. He had three sons, John, Nicholas, and William T. with one son migrating to America. The burial records in St. George Parish in South Carolina from Mar. 25, 1678 to Sept. 29, 1679 show an Amy Bretlande the wife of William T. Bretlande being buried there. So it is highly possible the name was once Bretlande. As census records up to 1810 shows the name as being spelled in various ways in 1790 it was Breels in 1800 Breeler in 1810 Breland. It is recorded that Absolom was one of seven brothers that went into Mississippi from 1812 to 1830. They were Absolom, Samuel, Henry, Josiah, Hiram, Robert, and Elisha.

2. At the close of Civil War in which is reported but not verified, Hiram Jackson served upon returning home he found his estate depleted. All of his livestock sold for confederate money which was worthless and the rest taken by Northern troops he sold his land for what he could get and left for Texas a new land then. Leaving in 1865 after about a year he came to where the town of Mart now is, staying about a year on the south end of what is now S. Carpenter Street then he moved to the old Davis ranch, then moving next to the Hanna ranch about three miles west of Mart. In 1873 he bought 338 acres of land where he built the first house of lumber in the Mart Community. The house has been occupied by his descendants since then, it is now occupied by Clifton Breland. He stayed active in Mart affairs in early times, he and his son Lewis Cass building the first church in Mart which was then known as Willow Springs. He was noted for his skill as a hunter adding to his income by killing game and selling it.

He was active in affairs of Mart being the one that suggested the name of Mart when they had to change it from Willow Spring in order to secure a post office in 1880. He was the second postmaster of Mart following W. B. Stodghill. He was the first candidate to receive degree from Masonic lodge after it was formed, he was an early merchant of Mart while he was here. In the early 1890's he sold his store and farm, owning what is now called The Townsend farm, and moved to West Texas near Stamford where he engaged in farming and cattle raising until he retired. His daughter Ida was the first child born in Mart in 1874.

Lewis Cass Breland left Miss. with his father in 1865. Living with his father until his marriage to Jane Breland who was the daughter of Timothy Titus Breland who was the son of Elisha Breland this history covers both sides of the descendants of Lewis Cass and Jane Breland. Upon his marriage he bought 78 acres of land off the west side of his father's farm. What is now known as the Folley Hill. After the death of his parents he sold his farm and bought the other heirs part of parents farm having already bought 44 acres on north side from Mr. Brooks. Having some children of school age he bought house in town on Navarro Ave. now belonging to a great grandson David Lee Breland. When they formed the first Baptist Church he owned 100 acres of land from S. Carpenter to S. County Line road. He gave 1 acre to build church on and sold rest to Mr. Ingram. He worked as a carpenter when young building house and barns on Punchard farm and Smith ranch. He was the first deputy sheriff in Mart, a member of the Masonic and Woodmen Lodges, he and Professor Dancer organized the Mart Public School.
